Indigenous Educational Pedagogy

Indigenous pedagogy is culturally relevant, involves the whole community in the learning process, and recognizes the strength of the individual to explore and develop within a community of supports in and outside the school.

Residential School Dialogues

The legacy of residential school affects dialogues between the aboriginal community, schools and teachers today. This dialogue is necessary to understand the reluctance of some aboriginal peoples to engage in educational institutions.

<http://www.tedxtoronto.com/talks/gabrielle-scrimshaw/>

Watch as Aboriginal young professional Gabrielle Scrimshaw discusses her personal journey, moving from the Hatchet Lake First Nation community in Northern Saskatchewan to Toronto, and the resultant challenges she struggled with and the hurdles she overcame. She discusses, at length, the issues that Aboriginal youth currently face, in Canada and elsewhere. She articulates how Aboriginal Canadian youth currently stand on a precipice, and that their fates may lie in either direction contingent on the action or inaction of Canadian citizens and government.
