Closing thoughts on the school year

Acknowledge that this has been the most difficult year for teachers, parents, and even students.

We know that there were many events and ways of doing things that we did not do or were done very differently. The level of anxiety is noticeable, and we hope that the fall will bring a renewed hope and gratitude for what we can do together. We will be working as a staff on what is 'sacred' to us about the KSM school experience and what we would fight for. If you as a parent group have any thoughts on what you hold "sacred" for your child's school experience please drop them the chat, send me an email, or let me know as your voice is valued and needed.
